California Proposition 65 – Compliance Statement

Purpose

This statement provides information regarding California Proposition 65 (CA Prop 65) in relation to products supplied by our company.

Regulatory Background

California Proposition 65 is a regulation enacted in 1986 by the State of California with the purpose of protecting drinking water sources and ensuring that consumers are informed about potential exposure to chemicals known to the State of California to cause cancer or reproductive toxicity. The regulation requires businesses to provide clear and appropriate warnings prior to exposing individuals to listed substances, regardless of whether such exposure occurs knowingly or unknowingly.

Scope of Application

California Proposition 65 applies to all entities that manufacture, distribute, or market products within the State of California. Although our company does not operate directly in the Californian market, this regulation may be applicable to products supplied for distribution in that territory.

Substances of Concern

The State of California maintains and periodically updates a list of chemicals identified as carcinogenic or toxic to reproduction. This list currently contains more than 1,000 substances.

Our products may contain substances included in this list. The presence of such substances, as well as the manufacture, sale, or use of products containing them, is not prohibited under California Proposition 65.

Customer Responsibilities

Entities placing products on the market in California may be subject to specific obligations under California Proposition 65, including but not limited to the provision of appropriate consumer warnings. Compliance with such obligations remains the responsibility of the entity marketing the products in California.
